The spread of the coronavirus, COVID-19, is of significant concern to all of us at Granger & Co, and we are absolutely committed to protecting the safety and welfare of all of our staff and our customers.

We’d like to reassure you that we are monitoring the guidance being produced by Public Health England daily and ensuring that their recommendations are acted on.

Our team members have been clearly briefed and understand that their actions can help to avoid the spread of COVID-19. We have strict guidelines in place: our team members must report any signs of illness or potential contacts with family, friends or colleagues who may be ill before attending work, without exception.

It is our policy that anyone who returns from or travels to any of the specified countries will be asked to self-quarantine for a period of 14 days upon returning, irrelevant of whether they are ill or not, as a safety precaution.

We have also reminded our staff of the need to maintain impeccable personal hygiene standards, and as a minimum they have to wash their hands upon arrival at the restaurant, and at least every 30 minutes, no matter what task they are completing.

In order to help avoid any transmission within the restaurant, we are also asking that all guests sanitise their hands upon arrival making use of the hand gel provided on entry, and of course, washing hands with soap in our bathrooms.

We believe that our approach is robust, but we are monitoring our sources of advice for updates constantly and will amend our procedures accordingly, and quickly if required.

If you have any further questions, please contact us at info@grangerandco.com

Thank you for your continued support and loyalty and we look forward to welcoming you in our restaurants.
